Subject: Zoning

Kathleen,

After reading the Guest Column in the June 5 Missoulian I think there may be some misconceptions concerning proposed zoning regulations. The article is written by intensive agriculturists, Jack and Helen Eden. They fear that they will not be able to sell their ten acres as the agriculture land as it is now used, but only to someone willing to divide it into one residence per acre. I was under the impression that densities were defined as maximums, but not restricted to the specified density. In other words, the land could be used for any lesser density than that specified in the zoning regulations, one unit per 10 acres. What is the correct interpretation?

Thank you for your hard work and dedication to our county government. Let us continue to work together to find common ground within the community.
